"LIGHT" TROUBLES (East Oregonian.)

Though no promises are made the electrical people say that they expect the current to be on between now and darkness this evening. From advices received from the power plant this afternoon they are expecting to see the service resumed within a few hours.

The power has now been off entirely since a week ago Sunday night. At that time the power plant was put out of commission by a storm that have had no "juice."

At Walla Walla the electric company retained an old steam plant and as a result the town has had lights during the past week, though the service has been poor.
